Line 11: Feminisms and development

This line seeks to bring together those works that address development studies from a feminist and gender perspective, in alignment with the objective of "ending all forms of discrimination against all women and girls throughout the world" (SDG 5.1). Inequalities in areas such as employment, universal access to reproductive and sexual health, economic resources, leadership positions in all regions, and persistent violence against girls and women internationally and in diverse contexts (labor, educational, family, etc.), including trafficking for sexual exploitation, are issues of concern in the 2030 Agenda and in the Sustainable Development Goals (SDG 5) and also in this line of the conference.

Of interest are scientific works that, using a diversity of methodological approaches, not only offer a global and / or local panorama of existing gender inequalities, but also propose solutions (interventions, programs, strategies, policies) based on evidence. The globality of contributions of this line will reflect the very diverse options and realities of women at the international level, thus attending their diversity in terms of culture, ethnicity, socio-economy, religion, family, etc.
